Hello:

I feel strongly that Americans have a right to know as much information as possible about the food they eat. This is a basic right that goes hand in hand with many other cherished freedoms.

In particular, with the many scientific discoveries that impact on all aspects of food production, I especially want to know if any of the foods I eat are genetically engineered. A democracy has no room in it for secrets like this.

The government should serve the best interests of the American people--not those of the agribusiness corporations that prefer Americans to remain ignorant of what is in their food or how it is grown.

Please do everything in your power to give Americans the right to know.

Very truly yours,
